Just To Make You Smile Awhile

LITTLE Mary had been taken to the Zoo for the first time, and when she got to the storks she threw them bits of bun. One of them gobbled them down and then nodded his head for more.

Turning to her mother, Mary asked: "Mummy, what kind of a bird is that?"

"It's a stork, darling," replied mother.

"Oh," said Mary, after a moment's silence, "no wonder it recognised me."

THE ambitious young actor had set out to conquer the world with "Hamlet," but the tour soon ended and he was compelled to walk home.

"Didn't they like you?" asked a sympathetic friend.

"They didn't seem to," replied the actor, sadly.

"But didn't they ask you to come before the curtain?"

"Ask me," repeated the would-be Hamlet, with tears in his eyes. "Ask me! They dared me!"

SHE was having her first driving lesson and her husband was the teacher. Suddenly, finding herself faced with a difficult traffic problem, she lost her head.

"Tell me quickly," she cried. "What do I do now?"

"Oh," he replied, quietly, "just imagine that I'm driving and do what you'd say I should do."

A STORY told at the Congress of Country Women of the World:—

The question was asked at a local women's institute: "Why do we put a pinch of soda in the vegetable water?"

One of the members replied: "To kill the vitamins."
